

Companies that offer college tuition reimbursement

One way to defray college costs is work for a company that offers tuition assistance. As you move through your senior year and you consider looking for employment that will help with your college costs the companies listed below may help.

Many of your bigger companies offer tuition assistance after you have worked for the company for about six months. Michigan Bell paid for most of my graduate costs.

While many of you will not be working for a big company right now I wanted to provide a list of companies that help their employees with educational assistance.

Many of these companies are located around college campuses. If you start around Downriver you can probably transfer to a store by your college.

If you know of any companies that offer tuition assistance benefits please send me an Email so I can add them to the list.

Barnes & Noble Continuing Education

- Our continuing education program offers full-time booksellers tuition assistance if you choose to further your business career by taking courses toward a job-related degree.

McDonald's management team.

- Educational assistance

UPS

- Tuition Reimbursement (Part Time Too)

Hilton Hotels (Most hotels offer education assistance)

- Full Time Employees - Educational Assistance Program/Tuition Reimbursement

Starbucks

- Tuition Assistance

Home Depot

- Tuition Reimbursement

Lowe's

- All full-time regular employees, after one year of service

Kohl's

- Tuition Reimbursement

Target

- Work-related courses and receive up to $3,000 reimbursement per year for undergraduate

Lands' End

- Educational assistance (Part Time Too)

Aeropostale

- Tuition Reimbursement

Best Buy

- Tuition Reimbursement- Apply for tuition reimbursement up to $3,500 per year for undergrad

KFC

- Tuition Assistance

GAP

- Reimbursed up to $5,000 per year for approved, job-related academic courses